

Environ Focus Frown Treatment

WHAT IT IS

A high-tech anti-ageing treatment using sound waves and Environ skincare products

TESTER SAYS

Chris McLaughlin, 63, health editor: 'My therapist, the charming Victoria, checked with Environ when I mentioned diabetes. They were concerned about skin sensitivity but agreed she could go ahead with one modification. Victoria applied cleanser, toner, and Frown serum. Then she used a small probe in circles for about 15 minutes. The probe was electrified with a low level current and made a high-pitched whine – a bit tiresome. A vitamin mask followed. (Normally you would have more current but she skipped this bit because of diabetes.) Skin felt lighter and very clean. My partner couldn't see a difference but they said it would normally take six treatments for a full effect. The whole experience was very restful.'

HOW MUCH?

£80 for 45 minutes (prices vary depending on salon).

WHERE?

Available nationwide, environ.co.za. Environ stockists: naturesface.co.uk. Chris went to Good Looks Hair and Beauty Salon in London, 020 8852 0651, goodlooksbeauty.co.uk.

Dna Skin Treatment Facial by Debbie Thomas

WHAT IT IS

A bespoke treatment combining different methods including light therapy, radio frequency and hydra-dermabrasion.

TESTER SAYS

Patsy Wescott, 61, medical journalist: 'With her peachy skin, Debbie is living proof that her approach to skincare works. I do have extensive sun damage, she says, and my skin needs lifting, brightening and plumping. Treatment starts with a thorough clean and a lymphatic drainage massage. Next, a skin peel using salicylic acid is left for four minutes. When Debbie applies a neutraliser my face starts tingling but more neutraliser calms things. Hydra-dermabrasion follows, delivered by what looks like a mini-carpet sweeper. Then Debbie applies a vacuum-operated suction cup to sculpt my jaw area. Finally she uses red light treatment to help increase cellular renewal. My skin looks amazingly fresh and feels baby soft. My jawline also looks more defined. I loved the whole experience.'

HOW MUCH?

£145 for 60 minutes.
